ANGRA DO HEROÍSMO PATRIMONIAL CITY

Endowed with geographical and atmospheric features that allowed for safe anchorage, the city of Angra do Heroísmo, located on the island of Terceira in the Azores Archipelago, developed from the 16th century onward, becoming a mandatory stopover for maritime routes of ships heading to the Mina, India, and Brazil. Structured in a Renaissance urban design, the city grew in strategic importance and acquired a monumental character, evident in works such as the fortresses of São Sebastião and São Filipe, the Cathedral Se, the Church of Mercy, or the Palace of the Captains-General.

As a hub for people, tastes, and cultures from the Age of Discoveries, Angra do Heroísmo preserves an unparalleled artistic legacy of architecture, sculpture, carving, porcelain, tiles, and furniture, where the exoticism and preciousness of materials underscore the nobility of forms.

Despite being struck by the earthquake of 1980, Angra do Heroísmo retains a unique architectural and landscape heritage and has been classified as a World Heritage Site since 1983.
